

Does car insurance go down at 25?

Bankrate

Car insurance rates for young drivers can be eye-wateringly expensive, but does your car insurance premium decrease when you turn 25? Based on Bankrate’s study of average premiums, potentially yes. The average cost of car insurance for 25 year olds is $2,176 per year for full coverage and $654 per year for minimum coverage.

This is still more expensive than the average cost of car insurance for older adults, and it’s important to note that car insurance rates vary by the individual. So should you expect a decrease in car insurance rates once you turn 25 and by how much? Bankrate has the answers.

Does your insurance go down at 25?

Based on rates from Quadrant Information Services for the average cost of car insurance for all age groups, car insurance rates for 25-year-olds typically end up being lower compared to other young drivers.

“Generally, once you turn 25, your rates are going to be a little better,” said Robert Passmore, vice president of personal line policies for the American Property Casualty Insurance Association. Passmore added that when you turn 30, insurance companies consider you an adult and your rates will improve again if you maintain a clean driving record.

Average rates from the largest car insurance carriers by market share support this trend. The table below shows the average cost of a full coverage policy from these insurers for 25-year-olds, and how the rates compare to drivers aged 24 and 18.

How gender affects car insurance rates at 25

Gender is also considered by insurance companies when it comes to car insurance rates, although it is excluded as a rating factor in some states. Statistically, female drivers have fewer incidents behind the wheel compared to male drivers, including fewer DUIs and less serious accidents. This means less risk for car insurance companies, as evidenced by the lower average premium for 25-year-old female drivers compared to 25-year-old male drivers below:

AVERAGE ANNUAL FULL COVERAGE PREMIUM

25-year-old male	$2,247
25-year-old female	$2,106

Ways to save on car insurance as a 25-year-old driver

While teen drivers are often able to receive more competitive car insurance rates if staying on their family's policy compared to purchasing their own standalone coverage, young adult drivers may not be able to stay on their parents' policy if they move away from home. If you are a 25-year-old driver, talk to a licensed auto insurance agent about how to find the best car insurance for your needs and what can help with lowering the premium. Asking about car insurance discounts for 25-year-olds can also help if you move onto your own policy.

If you avoid accidents and traffic violations from ages 16 to 24, you will most likely get a better insurance rate when you turn 25. When you reach age 25, ask your insurer to review your policy, advised Amy Bach, executive director of insurance consumer group United Policyholders. "You always should ask," she said. "Do not wait to be offered a discount or a rate reduction."

Why you might not save on car insurance when you turn 25

Although average car insurance premiums show that 25-year-old drivers receive lower car insurance rates compared to drivers ages 16 to 24, this might not always be the case. A few of the scenarios below could be attributed to why your rates haven't decreased as expected, but the most accurate information will come from your insurance agent.

- Your state doesn't factor age. Some states have different regulatory restrictions on what can be used to calculate car insurance rates. Hawaii and Massachusetts are the two states that don't allow a driver's age to be factored in determining their car insurance premium.

- You have a few marks on your driving record. Distracted driving can lead to a speeding ticket or an at-fault accident, which could also result in a surcharge on your car insurance policy. These marks could take away any good driver discounts on your policy that were earned by maintaining a clean driving record.
- You received your driver's license more recently. When you get your driver's license matters in how you are rated by insurers. Drivers who start driving at 16 have almost a decade's worth of driving experience by the time they turn 25. On the other hand, a driver licensed for the first time in their early 20s has less experience driving, and subsequently could see higher rates.

Other factors that may affect your premiums

Age can be a critical factor in determining your car insurance premium, but it is only one part of the rating process. Other car insurance rating factors can also play a role in your final premium estimate, including these factors below:

- Where you live
- Your vehicle's make and model
- How frequently you drive
- Your credit history (in most states)
- Your gender (in most states)
- Your marital status
- Your driving record

All of these elements are weighed by each carrier differently, which is why car insurance rates will vary depending on the insurance company you request a quote from. Certain things, like driving safely to avoid accidents and moving violations, maintaining a good credit score and your coverage selections, could give you the best advantage in looking for a cheap car insurance policy.

Methodology

Bankrate utilizes Quadrant Information Services to analyze rates for all ZIP codes and carriers in all 50 states and Washington, D.C. Rates are weighted based on the population density in each geographic region. Quoted rates are based on 25-year-old male and female drivers with a clean driving record, good credit and the following full coverage limits:

Age: Rates were calculated by evaluating our base profile with the ages 18-60 (base: 40 years) applied. Depending on age, drivers may be a renter or homeowner. Age is not a contributing rating factor in Hawaii and Massachusetts due to state regulations.

Gender: The following states do not use gender as a determining factor in calculating premiums: California, Hawaii, Massachusetts, Michigan, North Carolina, Pennsylvania.
