

National Association of Insurance Commissioners Names 2022 Consumer Liaison Representatives

Insurance News Net

The National Association of Insurance Commissioners issued the following news release:

The National Association of Insurance Commissioners (NAIC) recently named 40 consumer liaison representatives for 2022. The 23 funded and 17 unfunded consumer representatives began their terms January 1. Nineteen of the funded consumer representatives participated in the program in 2021.

Established in 1992, the Consumer Liaison Program promotes consumer interaction with the NAIC's members, the insurance industry and interested parties through individual consumer representative's dedication and commitment to serving the public interest.

"Protecting our consumers is our top priority and that is why we depend so heavily on our consumer liaison representatives to provide our regulators with important and critical feedback," said Dean L. Cameron, NAIC President and Director of the Idaho Department of Insurance. "The NAIC and the states are always looking out for the best interest of our consumers in all decisions that we make."
