

No. 20-56020
IN THE
United States Court of Appeals
for the Ninth Circuit

PLAN CHECK DOWNTOWN III, LLC,

Plaintiff-Appellant,

v.

AMGUARD INSURANCE COMPANY, ET AL.

Defendants-Appellees.

On Appeal from the United States District Court
for the Central District of California, Los Angeles
No. 2:20-cv-06954-GW-SKx

MOTION OF AMICUS CURIAE UNITED POLICYHOLDERS TO SUBMIT BRIEF IN PARTIAL SUPPORT OF APPELLANT PLAN
CHECK DOWNTOWN III, LLC

Of counsel:

Jad H. Khazem
jkhazem@cov.com
COVINGTON & BURLING LLP
One CityCenter
850 Tenth Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20001
(202) 662-6000

David B. Goodwin (Cal. Bar No. 104469)
dgoodwin@cov.com
Hannah M. Chartoff (Cal. Bar No. 324529)
hchartoff@cov.com
COVINGTON & BURLING LLP
Salesforce Tower
415 Mission Street, Suite 5400
San Francisco, CA 94105-2533
(415) 591-6000

Counsel for Amicus Curiae United Policyholders

February 12, 2021

United Policyholders (“UP”) moves the Court for an order permitting it to file the enclosed amicus curiae memorandum of points and authorities in partial support of the Appellant. The memorandum, a copy of which is attached, brings to the Court’s attention longstanding California precedents and maxims of insurance law that bear directly on the issue of whether coronavirus-related losses are insurable under commercial property policies, but which some lower courts have for far too long overlooked during this pandemic. Amicus support is especially vital here because the issues implicated by this case are far-reaching and of critical importance, as they may affect the fate of insurance recoveries for small businesses throughout California.

I. INTEREST OF AMICUS CURIAE

UP is a respected national non-profit 501(c)(3) organization and policyholder advocate. Founded in 1991, for nearly three decades UP has operated as a dedicated information resource for individual and commercial insurance consumers throughout the entire United States, and has helped secure important trial and appellate victories for policyholders. During this historic pandemic, UP’s commitment to defending and arguing for policyholders’ rights to coverage for their wide-scale COVID-19 losses is more critical than ever.

UP assists purchasers of insurance when seeking a policy or pursuing a claim for loss. For example, UP is routinely called upon to help individual policyholders in the wake of large-scale national disasters such as floods and windstorms in the Midwest, wildfires in Arizona, California, Colorado, New Mexico, Oregon and Washington, and hurricanes in the Gulf States and across the Eastern Seaboard. This past year, UP has been engaged in the critical effort to assist business owners around the country whose operations have been affected by COVID-19 and public safety orders. UP is conducting educational workshops for businesses and trade associations and maintaining an online help library at uphelp.org/COVID.

In addition, UP's Executive Director has been an official consumer representative to the National Association of Insurance Commissioners since 2009. In that role, UP assists regulators in monitoring policy language and claim practices through presentations and collaboration and the development of model laws and regulations.

Since 1991, UP has filed amicus briefs in federal and state appellate courts across 42 states and in more than 500 cases, including more than 40 published appellate decisions applying California law and at least ten cases before this Court. UP's amicus briefs have been cited in the opinions of many state supreme courts, including the Supreme Court of California, as well as the U.S. Supreme Court. See, e.g., Humana Inc. v. Forsyth, 525 U.S. 299, 314 (1999); Pitzer Coll. v. Indian Harbor Ins. Co., 8 Cal. 5th 93, 104 (2019); Julian v. Hartford Underwriters Ins. Co., 35 Cal. 4th 747, 760 (2005); Cont'l Ins. Co. v. Honeywell Int'l, Inc., 188 A.3d 297, 322 (N.J. 2018); Allstate Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co. v. Wolfe, 105 A.3d 1181, 1185-86 (Pa. 2014).¹

II. UP FULFILLS THE CLASSIC ROLE OF AMICUS CURIAE

By submitting a brief in this matter, UP seeks to assist the Court on an important issue to many of the policyholders that UP advocates for—namely, the insurability of coronavirus-related losses—by drawing the Court’s attention to controlling law that has escaped lower courts’ attention to date. This is a quintessential role for amicus curiae, and courts in this Circuit routinely authorize the filing of amicus briefs in such circumstances. See Miller-Wohl Co. v. Comm’r of Lab. & Indus., 694 F.2d 203, 204 (9th Cir. 1982) (describing “the classic role of amicus curiae [as] assisting in a case of general public interest, supplementing the efforts of counsel, and drawing the court’s attention to law that escaped consideration”).

¹ A complete listing of all cases in which UP has appeared as amicus curiae can be found in UP’s online Amicus Project library at www.uphelp.org/resources/amicus-briefs.

Further, “courts frequently welcome amicus briefs from nonparties concerning legal issues that have potential ramifications beyond the parties directly involved.” Safari Club Int’l v. Harris, 2015 WL 1255491, at *1 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 13, 2015) (quoting NGV Gaming, Ltd. v. Upstream Point Molate, LLC, 355 F. Supp. 2d 1061, 1067 (N.D. Cal. 2005)). Such is the case here. This Court’s adjudication of the recurring legal issue of whether the perils posed by the coronavirus pandemic constitute an insurable loss may bear directly on the prospects of insurance recovery for pandemic-affected policyholders throughout California (and beyond). As a policyholder advocate, UP has a strong interest in ensuring that policyholders receive the full amount of insurance coverage available to them under the insurance policies that their insurers prepared and sold to them.

Moreover, “most courts have granted amicus participation ... ‘when the amicus has unique information or perspective that can help the court beyond the help that the lawyers for the parties are able to provide.’” Duronslet v. Cnty. of Los Angeles, 2017 WL 5643144, at *1 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 23, 2017) (quoting Cnty. Ass’n for Restoration of Env’t (CARE) v. DeRuyter Bros. Dairy, 54 F. Supp. 2d 974, 975 (E.D. Wash. 1999)). Again, that is precisely the case here. As a policyholder advocate with deep insurance industry knowledge that has filed amicus briefs in more than 500 cases, UP's amicus brief represents a different perspective from that of the Appellant in this case, which is not represented by an insurance coverage specialist. UP's brief also offers a helpful perspective because its briefs have been cited with approval by the California Supreme Court, the highest tribunal enunciating the law that governs this case.

It bears adding that, while insurers are "repeat players" in coverage litigation, most policyholders are not. Coleman v. Gulf Ins. Group, 41 Cal. 3d 782, 806 n.9 (1986) (Bird, C.J., dissenting); see also Travelers Ins. Co. v. Budget Rent-A-Car Sys., Inc., 901 F.2d 765, 771 (9th Cir. 1990) (describing insurance companies as "institutional litigants"). Thus, if UP were denied the opportunity to present its arguments, from the perspective of a policyholder advocate steeped in insurance law, while the appellee insurance company retained its position as the only institutional litigant in this case, the Court would then be deprived of a symmetry of advocacy necessary for the fair and even-handed development of the law.

Finally, there is no downside to granting UP's motion for leave to file the amicus brief. In this Circuit, courts have oft "held it is 'preferable to err on the side of permitting amicus briefs.'" Earth Island Inst. v. Nash, 2019 WL 6790682, at *2 (E.D. Cal. Dec. 12, 2019) (quoting Duronslet, 2017 WL 5643144, at *1, and in turn citing Neonatology Assocs., P.A. v. C.I.R., 293

F.3d 128, 133 (3d Cir. 2002) (Alito, J.)) (brackets and some quotation marks omitted). This is so because “if the filed amicus brief turns out to be unhelpful, the court can then simply disregard it.” Id. (internal quotation marks omitted). “On the other hand, if a good brief is rejected, the Court will be deprived of a resource that might have been of assistance.”

Duronslet, 2017 WL 5643144, at *1 (brackets omitted).

For the foregoing reasons, UP respectfully requests leave to file the attached amicus curiae brief.²

DATED: February 12, 2021

Respectfully submitted,

COVINGTON & BURLING LLP

By: /s/ David B. Goodwin

David B. Goodwin

Attorney for Amicus Curiae
UNITED POLICYHOLDERS

² The undersigned is representing UP in this matter on a pro bono basis.

No. 20-56020
IN THE
United States Court of Appeals
for the Ninth Circuit

PLAN CHECK DOWNTOWN III, LLC,

Plaintiff-Appellant,

v.

AMGUARD INSURANCE COMPANY, ET AL.

Defendants-Appellees.

On Appeal from the United States District Court
for the Central District of California, Los Angeles
No. 2:20-cv-06954-GW-SKx

BRIEF OF AMICUS CURIAE UNITED POLICYHOLDERS IN PARTIAL SUPPORT OF APPELLANT PLAN CHECK
DOWNTOWN III, LLC

Of counsel:

Jad H. Khazem
jkhazem@cov.com
COVINGTON & BURLING LLP
One CityCenter
850 Tenth Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20001
(202) 662-6000

David B. Goodwin (Cal. Bar No. 104469)
dgoodwin@cov.com
Hannah M. Chartoff (Cal. Bar No. 324529)
hchartoff@cov.com
COVINGTON & BURLING LLP
Salesforce Tower
415 Mission Street, Suite 5400
San Francisco, CA 94105-2533
(415) 591-6000

Counsel for Amicus Curiae United Policyholders

February 12, 2021

CORPORATE DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

Pursuant to Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 26.1, United Policyholders certifies that it is a non-profit 501(c)(3) organization with no parent company and no publicly traded stock.

COVINGTON & BURLING LLP

By: /s/ David B. Goodwin

David B. Goodwin

Attorney for Amicus Curiae
UNITED POLICYHOLDERS

February 12, 2021

TABLE OF CONTENTS

CORPORATE DISCLOSURE STATEMENT	i
STATEMENT OF INTEREST OF AMICUS CURIAE.....	1
INTRODUCTION	1
ARGUMENT.....	5
I. This Is Not the Right Case to Certify to the California Supreme Court	5
II. The Court Can and Should Resolve by Remanding with Instructions to Grant Leave to Amend	8
III. This Is Not the Right Case to Delineate What Causes Physical Loss or Damage.....	9
IV. If the Court Does Decide to Address the Physical Loss or Damage Issue, it Should Hold that the District Court Erred	12
A. Physical Property Suffers “Physical Loss or Damage” When a Fortuitous Peril Impairs the Property’s Use or Function	13
B. The “Physical” Injury Requirement Only Guards Against Intangible or Non-Fortuitous Losses, Not Unexpected Loss of Use of Real or Personal Property	16
C. Damage to the Usability of Property Due to a Viral Pandemic and Related Government Orders Constitutes Physical Loss and Damage	18
1. The Coronavirus Pandemic is Physically Dangerous	19
2. The Coronavirus Pandemic Has Caused Physical Loss and Damage	22
D. The Ruling Below Erects Barriers to Coverage that Lack a Precedential or Policy Basis.....	25

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

	Page(s)
Cases
Armstrong World Indus., Inc. v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. , 45 Cal. App. 4th 1 (1995).....	16, 19, 24
Avila v. Travelers Ins. Co. , 651 F.2d 658 (9th Cir. 1981)	9, 10, 11
Balistreri v. Pacifica Police Dept. , 901 F.2d 696 (9th Cir. 1990)	8
Bautista v. Los Angeles Cnty. , 216 F.3d 837 (9th Cir. 2000)	8
Com. Union Ins. Co. v. Sponholz , 866 F.2d 1162 (9th Cir. 1989)	17
Doyle v. Fireman’s Fund Ins. Co. , 21 Cal. App. 5th 33 (2018)	17
EOTT Energy Corp. v. Storebrand Int’l Ins. Co. , 45 Cal. App. 4th 565 (1996)	14
Galilea, LLC v. ACGS Marine Ins. Co. , 879 F.3d 1052 (9th Cir. 2018)	10
Goodwill Indus. of Orange Cnty., Cal. v. Phila. Indem. Ins. Co. , No. 30-2020-01169032-CU-IC-CXC, Dkt. 79 (Super. Ct. Orange Cnty. Jan. 28, 2021)	13, 24
Gregory Packaging, Inc. v. Travelers Prop. Cas. Co. of Am. , 2014 WL 6675934 (D.N.J. Nov. 25, 2014).....	16
Griffin v. Arpaio , 557 F.3d 1117 (9th Cir. 2009).....	7
Hawkins v. Kroger Co. , 906 F.3d 763 (9th Cir. 2018)	7

Hodsdon v. Mars, Inc.,
891 F.3d 857 (9th Cir. 2018)..... 7

Hughes v. Potomac Ins. Co. of D.C., 199 Cal. App. 2d 239 (1962)passim

MacKinnon v. Truck Ins. Exch.,
31 Cal. 4th 635 (2003) 25

McLinn v. F/V Fjord,
744 F.2d 677 (9th Cir. 1984)..... 5

Moss v. U.S. Secret Serv.,
572 F.3d 962 (9th Cir. 2009)..... 8

MRI Healthcare Ctr. of Glendale, Inc. v. State Farm Gen. Ins. Co., 187 Cal. App. 4th 766 (2010)13, 17, 26, 27

Murray v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co.,
509 S.E.2d 1 (W.V. 1998).....16

P.F. Chang’s China Bistro, Inc. v. Certain Underwriters at Lloyd’s,
No. 20STCV17169, Minute Order (Super. Ct. L.A. Cnty.
Feb. 4, 2021)12, 20, 23, 26

Pacific Marine Ctr., Inc. v. Phila. Indem. Ins. Co., 248 F. Supp. 3d 984, 993 (E.D. Cal. 2017)14, 26

Riordan v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co.,
589 F.3d 999 (9th Cir. 2009) 5

Simon Marketing, Inc. v. Gulf Ins. Co.,
149 Cal. App. 4th 616 (2007) 17, 27

State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Superior Court,
215 Cal. App. 3d 1436 (1989) 18

Strickland v. Fed. Ins. Co.,
200 Cal. App. 3d 792 (1988)..... 14, 15, 24

Thee Sombrero, Inc. v. Scottsdale Ins. Co.,
28 Cal. App. 5th 729, 739 (2018) 27, 28

Total Intermodal Servs. Inc. v. Travelers Prop. Cas. Co. of Am., 2018 WL 3829767 (C.D. Cal. July 11, 2018)14

Universal City Studios Credit Union v. Cumis Ins. Soc’y,
208 Cal. App. 4th 730 (2012) 25

Ward General Ins. Servs., Inc. v. Emps. Fire Ins. Co., 114 Cal. App. 4th 548 (2003).....17, 26

Other Authorities

Cal. Rules of Court 8.548(a)..... 7

Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 29(a)(4)(E)1

STATEMENT OF INTEREST OF *AMICUS CURIAE*³

Amicus curiae United Policyholders (“UP”) is a non-profit organization whose mission is to serve as an effective voice for insurance policyholders throughout the country. UP is funded by donations and grants and does not sell insurance or accept money from insurers.

During this pandemic, UP’s commitment to arguing for policyholders’ rights to coverage for their wide-scale COVID-19 losses is more vital than ever. By submitting this brief, UP seeks to assist the Court on an issue of critical importance to the many policyholders for whom UP advocates—namely, the insurability of COVID-related losses—by drawing the Court’s attention to controlling law that has escaped lower courts’ attention to date.

INTRODUCTION

This case follows an unfortunate but all-too-common script: A small California business is forced to curtail its operations severely due to the viral pandemic and attendant government restrictions. The business turns to its property insurer for coverage for its business losses, and yet the insurer refuses to assist—asserting that while operations at the ³ Pursuant to Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 29(a)(4)(E), UP affirms that no counsel for a party authored this brief in whole or in part and that no person other than UP or its counsel made any monetary contributions intended to fund the preparation or submission of this brief.

policyholder's physical premises may have been impaired, such harm does not satisfy the coverage trigger of "physical loss of or damage to" property.

When the small business goes to federal court to pursue its insurance coverage rights, its insurer—a repeat player in coverage litigation, armed with disproportionately high-powered counsel and an incentive to secure early COVID-19 judicial "wins"—immediately files a motion to dismiss its policyholder's insurance claim.⁴ And the federal court, without the benefit of having before it the full range of relevant state precedents (much less critical discovery into and expert testimony concerning the physical impacts of the coronavirus), agrees to dismiss the claim, based on a faulty prediction that California courts would not treat pandemic-related damage to the usability of physical property as "physical loss or damage."

This Court need not, and ought not, affirm this erroneous prediction on appeal. Rather, the most appropriate course is to (a) decline to certify the "physical loss or damage" issue to state courts or endorse the district court's physical injury analysis, and (b) remand this case with instructions to permit re-pleading (or, alternatively, to sustain the dismissal based only on narrow policy exclusion grounds, an issue on which this brief takes no position). The reasons for this course of action are four-fold.

⁴ In this appeal, for example, the insurer has retained Simpson Thacher, one of the largest law firms in the world, to defend against business income claims brought by two small local restaurants.

First, this case presents a poor vehicle for certification of the “physical loss or damage” issue. The record on appeal lacks the factual record necessary to adequately assess the existence of “physical loss of or damage to” property such that a sufficiently helpful response could be obtained from California’s high court. Moreover, resolution of the physical injury question may not be outcome-determinative here, as the policy includes a standard form virus exclusion that according to the insurer (although, as noted, UP takes no position on the matter) strips coverage for COVID-related losses even if physical injury is alleged. Given those complications, certification here would be ill-advised.⁵

Second, if this Court were to conclude that the virus exclusion does not eliminate all coverage (rather than affirm on that alternative ground), then this case would be a strong candidate for remand with instructions to grant leave to amend to consider the physical injury issue on a full record. Such remand would allow Plan Check to further connect its business losses to dangerous physical viral perils.

⁵ Although UP files this amicus in support of the position of Plan Check Downtown III on the merits of the “physical loss or damage” issue, it does not support Plan Check’s request for certification. Dkt. 12 at 12 n.4.

Third, this federal appeal is simply not the right case to attempt to determine when pandemic-affected property suffers physical injury for insurance purposes, because that is an issue of state law on which California courts should speak first. Indeed, there are several pending California state court cases that are expected to resolve this issue.

Fourth, if this Court does address the merits of the dismissal, it should hold that the district court erred in declining to find “physical loss of or damage to” property in the circumstances of this pandemic. Multiple California state trial courts have so found at the pleading stage, and for good reason: It has long been the rule in California that property is physically lost or damaged when its utility is materially impaired by an external peril, even if the property’s basic structure remains intact. Settled California law also confirms that noxious substances that impair the safety of property give rise to physical injury for purposes of insurance coverage.

Under this established authority, a business suffers physical loss or damage when a viral pandemic and related civil restrictions undermine the safety and fitness for use of such premises. Almost none of this authority was brought to the attention of the district court by the insurer (or the policyholder), and the district court erred when it failed to locate, and follow, that controlling California precedent.

ARGUMENT

I. This Is Not the Right Case to Certify to the California Supreme Court

“Even where state law is unclear, resort to the certification process is not obligatory.” Riordan v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 589 F.3d 999, 1009 (9th Cir. 2009). Instead, the decision to certify questions of state law to state courts “rests in the sound discretion of this court.” McLinn v. F/V Fjord, 744 F.2d 677, 681 (9th Cir. 1984). This case presents a poor vehicle for the Court to exercise its discretion to certify questions concerning the insurability of COVID-19 losses, both because this case is being appealed from an undeveloped record, and because such questions may not be outcome-determinative here.

First, in considering whether to approve or withhold certification, this Circuit considers whether the legal issue can be framed to produce a “helpful response” from the state court. Id. In this appeal, however, the potential helpfulness of a certified determination is hampered by the thin record from the district court, which dismissed a 22-page complaint unaccompanied by any extrinsic factual support. In order for resolution of a certified question to be “sufficiently helpful” in guiding California courts on the stream of cases that must evaluate the fact-intensive questions of coverage and attendant physical injury issues, the Court should have before it a record that would allow future courts to analogize facts related to their own damages to those relied upon in the certified question.

Notably, as a consequence of the complaint's barebones allegations and the termination of the case before discovery, the record has no evidence of, among other things, the rapid transmissibility of the coronavirus, scientific studies reflecting the virus's capacity to alter and adhere to surfaces or linger and circulate in the air for extended periods of time, the array of remedial measures necessary to contain or manage the virus, or the full range of government restrictions that attend viral spread. See Section IV.C.1., infra. Thus, if this matter were certified, and if the California Supreme Court were to accept the certification, that Court (or this Court, were it to address the merits of the "physical loss or damage" argument) would be guessing about the physical implications of the pandemic and their effect on property. Judgments of that type, with substantial insurance proceeds depending on the answer, should be made on the basis of expert testimony and fact-finding.

Second, a certified determination as to whether Plan Check has adequately pleaded a claim for insurance coverage would not necessarily resolve this appeal, because the record reveals potential alternative grounds for affirming the dismissal of Plan Check's claim. Specifically, the AmGuard policy includes a standard form Insurance Services Office virus exclusion, which purports to exclude “loss or damage caused directly or indirectly by ... [a]ny virus” 1-ER-005-006. Although the district court did not address the virus exclusion argument in its dismissal order, 1-ER-010 n.7, this Court “may affirm for any reason supported by the record,” Griffin v. Arpaio, 557 F.3d 1117, 1121 (9th Cir. 2009), or alternatively, remand for further consideration by the district court of the unaddressed issue, Hawkins v. Kroger Co., 906 F.3d 763, 773 n.11 (9th Cir. 2018).

While UP does not take a position on applicability of the subject virus exclusion in this amicus brief, it notes that the Court cannot certify this appeal to the California Supreme Court unless the Court first finds that the exclusion does not provide a potential alternative basis for affirmance. That is because the California Supreme Court requires that the certified issue be determinative in the pending matter, Cal. Rules of Court 8.548(a)—which the coverage issue will not be if a policy exclusion applies to strip any coverage that could otherwise be established. See Hodsdon v. Mars, Inc., 891 F.3d 857, 865 n.7 (9th Cir. 2018) (denying request to certify to the California Supreme Court where, as here, “the answer to Plaintiff’s question [would] not [be] outcome-determinative”).

In short, this case's undeveloped record and the language of the subject policy make it a poor candidate for certification.

II. The Court Can and Should Resolve by Remanding with Instructions to Grant Leave to Amend

If this Court were to conclude that the virus exclusion does not bar coverage for pandemic-related losses, then this case would be a prime candidate to remand with instructions to the district court to grant leave to amend the complaint and, if the complaint pleads a claim, allow discovery, so that the trier of fact can assess on a proper record whether viral proliferation causes physical loss or damage. Indeed, if the virus exclusion were set aside, then Plan Check would presumably be in a stronger position to plead a nexus between its business losses and the physical viral perils posed by the pandemic.

“The standard for granting leave to amend is generous.” Balistreri v. Pacifica Police Dept., 901 F.2d 696, 701 (9th Cir. 1990). Where a complaint's “deficiencies [are] readily curable with some guidance from the court,” further amendment may be warranted. Bautista v. Los Angeles Cnty., 216 F.3d 837, 841-42 (9th Cir. 2000); see also Moss v. U.S. Secret Serv., 572 F.3d 962, 972 (9th Cir. 2009) (granting leave to amend where plaintiff “initiated the present lawsuit without the benefit of the Court's latest pronouncements” on pleading requirements).

At present, it is possible that uncertainty regarding whether the virus exclusion applies hampered Plan Check's ability to fully allege that virus-related perils acting upon its physical premises caused "physical loss of or damage to" property. If this Court were to eliminate this uncertainty by clarifying that the virus exclusion is either unenforceable or inapplicable in the pandemic context, then Plan Check would have greater leeway to plead such allegations. In that scenario, this Court would have solid grounds to grant leave to amend so that Plan Check could further strengthen its complaint with the benefit of this Court's intervening guidance.

III. This Is Not the Right Case to Delineate What Causes Physical Loss or Damage

Although there are multiple lines of cases construing "physical loss or damage" terms in insurance policies (discussed in Section IV infra), applying those cases to the specific facts of this pandemic presents novel questions that are currently being addressed by multiple California state courts. Under these circumstances, this Court would be well-served allowing the state courts to speak first on the coverage question.

The Court has long exercised restraint and declined to "express [its] construction of a novel question of state law where it is not necessary to do so." Avila v. Travelers Ins. Co., 651 F.2d 658, 660 (9th Cir. 1981). The Court's restraint is rooted in the sound conviction that "[i]t is unnecessary

[for it] to put [its] imprimatur on emerging and as yet unsettled issues of California [] law.” Id. at 661.

Property loss or damage from the novel coronavirus, and ensuing insurance implications, is just such an “emerging and as yet unsettled” state law issue. The widespread losses and civil authority orders associated with COVID-19 began less than a year ago. California courts have not yet engaged in a trial on the merits of any claim presenting losses associated with the pandemic and related civil orders, let alone addressed the nuances and subtle distinctions between policies that may impact this body of law. Although there is authority on physical loss or damage in first-party insurance policies like this one, California state courts have largely not yet had the opportunity to apply that case law to the specific conditions associated with the pandemic. Jumping ahead of those state courts in this coverage context would be especially unusual, given that “insurance is traditionally an area of state regulation.” Galilea, LLC v. ACGS Marine Ins. Co., 879 F.3d 1052, 1058 (9th Cir. 2018).

It is also unnecessary for this Court to weigh in on the issue at this time because it will be imminently addressed by state courts. At present, more than 60 cases pending in California state courts allege some form of property policy coverage related to losses arising during the pandemic.⁶ Addressing the issue in this case before those courts have had a chance to weigh in on a fuller record is “unnecessary.” Avila, 651 F.2d at 660.

The additional defects in this case described in the sections above further militate against using this case as the platform to test the physical loss or damage issue. The thin record from the district court would make it more difficult for future courts to rely on any precedent generated by this Court, as physical injury inquiries are often fact-intensive. Furthermore, the existence of a virus exclusion in the policy presents additional complications in both pleading and reviewing allegations of physical injury. A future case without those deficiencies would provide a better record to address this important legal issue without creating confusion or requiring subsequent courts addressing the issue to revisit this Court’s rulings based on an actual factual record.

⁶ See Covid Coverage Litigation Tracker, University of Pennsylvania Carey Law School, <https://cclt.law.upenn.edu/cclt-case-list/> (viewed on Feb. 12, 2021); COVID Loss Recovery Initiative - Lawsuits, United Policyholders, <https://www.uphelp.org/covid-loss-recovery-initiative> (viewed on Feb. 6, 2021).

IV. If the Court Does Decide to Address the Physical Loss or Damage Issue, it Should Hold that the District Court Erred

Finally, if (despite the alternative options available to it) this Court were to reach the issue of whether pandemic-related perils can cause “physical loss of or damage to” property and thus trigger coverage, the Court should answer that question in the affirmative.

As detailed below, California courts have long adhered to the commonsense position that property is physically lost or damaged when its use or function is materially impaired by a fortuitous peril, even if the property’s basic structure remains intact. Further, settled California law confirms that noxious substances that compromise the safety of property give rise to physical injury for purposes of insurance coverage.

Under this established authority, a business suffers physical loss or damage when—as Plan Check has alleged—it is deprived of substantial use of its premises due to a pandemic and related government restrictions, whether temporarily or permanently. Indeed, this conclusion has only been reinforced in recent days, as California state trial courts have sustained COVID-19 coverage complaints over insurer demurrers, and dismissed federal district court rulings to the contrary as “not control[ling].” P.F. Chang’s China Bistro, Inc. v. Certain Underwriters at Lloyd’s, No. 20STCV17169, Minute Order (Super. Ct. L.A. Cnty. Feb. 4, 2021); Goodwill Indus. of Orange Cnty., Cal. v. Phila. Indem. Ins. Co., No. 30-2020-01169032-CU-IC-CXC, Dkt. 79 (Super. Ct. Orange Cnty. Jan. 28, 2021).

A. Physical Property Suffers “Physical Loss or Damage” When a Fortuitous Peril Impairs the Property’s Use or Function

Plan Check’s “all risks” policy covers its real and personal property. Under California law, such real or personal property may be physically lost or damaged when an external peril frustrates the property’s intended use.

According to the California Court of Appeal, “direct physical loss,” or damage, “contemplates an actual change in insured property then in a satisfactory state, occasioned by accident or other fortuitous event directly upon the property causing it to become unsatisfactory for future use or requiring that repairs be made to make it so.” MRI Healthcare Ctr. of Glendale, Inc. v. State Farm Gen. Ins. Co., 187 Cal. App. 4th 766, 779 (2010) (citation omitted and emphasis added); id. at 780 (“For there to be a ‘loss’ within the meaning of the policy ..., [property] must have been ‘damaged’ within the common understanding of that term.”).

In keeping with this expansive standard, California courts have found physical loss or damage in a wide range of circumstances involving perils that rob real or personal property of its use without also altering the property’s structural makeup. Such scenarios include changing soil conditions that render homes uninhabitable by placing them at risk of collapse, see Hughes v. Potomac Ins. Co. of D.C., 199 Cal. App. 2d 239, 248-49 (1962); Strickland v. Fed. Ins. Co., 200 Cal. App. 3d 792, 799-801 (1988); the dispossession of property through theft or conversion, see EOTT Energy Corp. v. Storebrand Int'l Ins. Co., 45 Cal. App. 4th 565, 569 (1996); Pac. Marine Ctr., Inc. v. Phila. Indem. Ins. Co., 248 F. Supp. 3d 984, 993 (E.D. Cal. 2017); and the loss of property due to mistaken shipment, see Total Intermodal Servs. Inc. v. Travelers Prop. Cas. Co. of Am., 2018 WL 3829767, at *3-4 (C.D. Cal. July 11, 2018).

The California Court of Appeal's decision in Hughes provides a vivid illustration of how property rendered unusable but otherwise intact is still "damaged" within the usual understanding of the term. In that case, the policyholders awoke one morning to discover that the land next to their home had washed away into a creek, leaving their otherwise intact home on the edge of a newly created cliff. 199 Cal. App. 2d at 242-43. The policyholders sought coverage for the cost of stabilizing their home under a property insurance policy that (much like Plan Check's policy) insured them against "all risks of physical loss of and damage to" their dwelling. Id. at 242. The insurer denied coverage, essentially arguing that the home could “not be[] ‘damaged’ so long as its paint remains intact and its walls adhere to one another.” Id. at 248.

The Court of Appeal rejected this narrow construction of the policy language. The Court held that, absent a specific limiting provision, “[c]ommon sense requires that a policy should not be [] interpreted” in such a way that an insured home “might be rendered completely useless to its owners, [yet] [the insurer] would deny that any loss or damage had occurred unless some tangible injury to the physical structure itself could be detected.” Id. at 248-49; accord Strickland, 200 Cal. App. 3d at 801 (rejecting the notion that an “insured [must] absorb the dangers inherent in living atop a land mass which is close to the point of failure” and holding that such dangers are “the type of risk [a property insurer is] paid to assume”).

The foregoing precedents in first-party cases align with settled California authority in the liability insurance context (thus far largely overlooked by district courts addressing the physical injury issue in COVID-19 cases) that holds that property is physically harmed and that property damage has therefore occurred when noxious substances, even in small or unrealized quantities, disturb the safe use of the property. See Armstrong World Indus., Inc. v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., 45 Cal. App. 4th 1, 91 (1995)

(when a policyholder is deemed liable for “the release of asbestos fibers, whatever the level of contamination,” or for the “health hazard [] of the potential for future releases,” the “injury to the buildings is a physical one”) (emphasis in original). Likewise, these California first-party decisions find support in persuasive out-of-state authorities that also find physical loss or damage based on fortuitous loss of use, irrespective of structural harm.⁷

B. The “Physical” Injury Requirement Only Guards Against Intangible or Non-Fortuitous Losses, Not Unexpected Loss of Use of Real or Personal Property

To the extent that California courts have placed limits on the breadth of the standard for “physical” loss or damage, those limits have been quite modest. To date, California appellate courts have declined to find insurable physical injury only when (a) the property in question is itself not physical or (b) the property is physical but has not been altered by an external peril.

⁷ See, e.g., Gregory Packaging, Inc. v. Travelers Prop. Cas. Co. of Am., 2014 WL 6675934, at *6 (D.N.J. Nov. 25, 2014) (“[C]ourts considering non-structural property damage claims have found that buildings rendered uninhabitable by dangerous gases or bacteria suffered direct physical loss or damage.”); Murray v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 509 S.E.2d 1, 5, 17 (W.V. 1998) (holding that “[d]irect physical loss [] may exist in the absence of structural damage to the insured property,” and holding that homes “suffered real damage when it became clear that rocks and boulders could come crashing down at any time,” such that homes “became unsafe for habitation” due to said threat).

In the first line of cases, the property was intangible and so was not susceptible to physical loss or damage. This includes, for example, lost electronic computer data, Ward Gen. Ins. Servs., Inc. v. Emps. Fire Ins. Co., 114 Cal. App. 4th 548, 555-56 (2003)⁸; cancelled business contracts, Simon Marketing, Inc. v. Gulf Ins. Co., 149 Cal. App. 4th 616, 623 (2007); or leaked trade secrets, id. at 623-24. None of these decisions concerns physical property that could be physically harmed.

The second line of cases involves tangible property that was neither lost nor damaged; rather, the property suffered from internal vice. This includes an MRI machine that could not turn on due to a defect “inherent” in “the machine itself,” MRI Healthcare, 187 Cal. App. 4th at 780; wine that was discovered to be counterfeit and thus of lesser value, Doyle v. Fireman’s Fund Ins. Co., 21 Cal. App. 5th 33, 38-40 (2018); property with a defective title, Com. Union Ins. Co. v. Sponholz, 866 F.2d 1162, 1163 (9th Cir. 1989) (California law); and a condominium tainted by “latent defects, faulty workmanship and construction code violations,” which the insurance policy excluded, State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Super. Ct., 215 Cal. App. 3d

⁸ In deeming electronic computer data “intangible,” 114 Cal. App. 4th at 556, the Ward court was apparently unaware of Albert Einstein’s theory, articulated in 1906, and subsequently confirmed by experiment, that electricity has mass and, hence, is tangible.

1436, 1439, 1442-43 (1989). In none of those cases was the subject loss external and accidental, i.e., fortuitous, and so those courts concluded that the property insurance policies at issue did not respond.

The above lines of cases, however, are conceptual worlds apart from a case involving both physical property, such as Plan Check's restaurants, and a fortuitous peril, such as a once-in-a-lifetime pandemic spurring changes to property and forcing the total or substantial shutdown of businesses.

C. Damage to the Usability of Property Due to a Viral Pandemic and Related Government Orders Constitutes Physical Loss and Damage

The coronavirus is a uniquely dangerous health and safety risk. The virus is potentially deadly, easily yet silently spread, and as such is one of the rare public health threats that have triggered government closure orders. Consequently, the unexpected coronavirus pandemic has caused policyholders like Plan Check to lose, in whole or in substantial part, safe use of their tangible property for business purposes—which, under the above-described Hughes and Armstrong lines of California precedents, constitutes “physical loss or damage” to property.

The following discussion reflects information in the public domain that is of the type that would be developed on remand were the case to proceed through discovery or which, if the Court decides to address the issue presented on this appeal, would be appropriate for judicial notice.

1. The Coronavirus Pandemic is Physically Dangerous

The coronavirus is, without question, a serious physical peril. It has given rise to an infectious disease that has plagued more than 100 million people worldwide and has taken the lives of millions of victims thus far.⁹ Because the virus has proven so hard to contain, it has led to a proliferation of governmental restrictions that have rendered numerous business properties unfit for their full intended use.

The coronavirus alters the physical conditions of property. The World Health Organization has advised that people can become infected with the coronavirus by touching virus-laden objects and surfaces, then touching their eyes, nose, or mouth. This mode of transmission—indirect transmission via objects and surfaces—is known as “fomite transmission.”¹⁰ To take one example, a study of a COVID-19 outbreak published in the ⁹ Johns Hopkins University & Medicine, COVID-19 Dashboard by the Center for Systems Science and Engineering, <https://coronavirus.jhu.edu/map.html> (viewed on Feb. 4, 2021).

¹⁰ WHO, Transmission of Sars-CoV-2: Implications for Infection Prevention Precautions (July 9, 2020), <https://www.who.int/news-room/commentaries/detail/transmission-of-sars-cov-2-implications-for-infection-prevention-precautions> (viewed on Feb. 4, 2021).

Emerging Infectious Diseases journal identified indirect transmission via objects such as elevator buttons and restroom taps as an important possible cause of a “rapid spread” of the coronavirus in a shopping mall in China.¹¹ Unfortunately, the coronavirus has a proclivity to “stick.” One recent study found that the coronavirus remained viable for up to 28 days on a range of common surfaces—e.g., glass, stainless steel, and money—left at room temperature.¹²

Also of note, infected persons can generate virus-laden aerosols that linger in the air even after the infected person has left the vicinity and can migrate substantial distances through a building’s ventilation systems. One study found the presence of the coronavirus within the HVAC system servicing hospital ward rooms of COVID-19 patients. This study detected SARS-CoV-2 RNA in ceiling vent openings, vent exhaust filters, and central ducts that were located more than 50 meters from the patients’ rooms.¹³

¹¹ Jing Cai et al., Indirect Virus Transmission in Cluster of COVID-19 Cases, Wenzhou, China, 2020, 26 Emerging Infectious Diseases 1343 (2020), https://wwwnc.cdc.gov/eid/article/26/6/20-0412_article (viewed on Feb. 4, 2021).

¹² Shane Riddell et al., The Effect of Temperature on Persistence of SARS-CoV-2 on Common Surfaces, 17 Virology J. 145 (2020), <https://virologyj.biomedcentral.com/articles/10.1186/s12985-020-01418-7> (viewed on Feb. 4, 2021).

¹³ Karolina Nissen et al., Long-Distance Airborne Dispersal of SARS-CoV-2 in Covid-19 Wards, 10 Sci. Rep. 19589 (2020),

Another study of an outbreak at a restaurant in China concluded that the spread of the coronavirus “was prompted by air-conditioned ventilation,” with persons who sat at tables downstream of the HVAC system’s air flow becoming infected.¹⁴ Based on “epidemiological evidence suggestive of [coronavirus] transmission through aerosol,”¹⁵ the Environmental Protection Agency, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention have recommended that facilities improve their ventilation and HVAC systems by, for example, increasing ventilation with outdoor air and air filtration.¹⁶

<https://www.nature.com/articles/s41598-020-76442-2> (viewed on Feb. 4, 2021).

¹⁴ Jianyun Lu et al., COVID-19 Outbreak Associated with Air Conditioning in Restaurant, Guangzhou, China, 26 Emerging Infectious Diseases 1628, 1629 (2020), https://wwwnc.cdc.gov/eid/article/26/7/20-0764_article (viewed on Feb. 4, 2021).

¹⁵ EPA, Indoor Air and COVID-19 Key References and Publications, <https://www.epa.gov/coronavirus/indoor-air-and-covid-19-key-references-and-publications> (viewed on Feb. 4, 2021) (capitalization omitted).

¹⁶ EPA, Indoor Air and Coronavirus (COVID-19), <https://www.epa.gov/coronavirus/indoor-air-and-coronavirus-covid-19> (viewed on Dec. 5, 2020); CDC, COVID-19 Employer Information for Office Buildings (Oct. 29, 2020), <https://www.cdc.gov/coronavirus/2019-ncov/community/office-buildings.html> (viewed on Dec. 5, 2020); OSHA, Guidance on Preparing Workplaces for COVID-19 12 (2020), <https://www.osha.gov/Publications/OSHA3990.pdf> (viewed on Feb. 4, 2021).

Due to the physical ramifications of the coronavirus, government officials have responded with restrictions that, among other things, seek to preserve property from viral contamination that could exacerbate this pandemic's human tragedy. In Executive Order N-33-20, Governor Newsom ordered all California residents (with limited exceptions) to stay at their place of residence—which in effect barred residents from leaving their homes to patronize Plan Check's restaurants. 2-ER-271. Likewise, patrons were prohibited from accessing Plan Check's restaurants under a Los Angeles order directing the closure of in-person dining, in response to the wide spread of a "COVID-19 virus [that] can spread easily from person to person and [that] is physically causing property loss or damage due to its tendency to attach to surfaces for prolonged periods of time." 2-ER-274-83.

2. The Coronavirus Pandemic Has Caused Physical Loss and Damage

The viral pandemic and attendant government restrictions have made it unsafe and, in many cases, unlawful for businesses to use property for its full intended function. Property undermined in this manner has, under California law and basic principles of insurance interpretation, been physically lost and damaged.

Recent California state court rulings have confirmed as much. Last week, the Superior Court in Los Angeles County, in addressing a COVID-19 coverage complaint filed by the P.F. Chang’s restaurant, held that “physical loss of or damage to’ property ha[d] been met in one or more ways, including” allegations of “(i) the actual or potential presence of virus in the air (whether in droplet nuclei, aerosols, droplets, or otherwise) in the vicinity of [the policyholder’s] restaurants ... ; (ii) the necessity of modifying physical behaviors through the use of social distancing, avoiding confined indoor spaces, and/or not congregating in the same physical area as others ... ; (iii) government orders requiring that physical spaces such as [the policyholder’s] dining rooms be shut-down; and/or (iv) the need to mitigate the threat or actual physical presence of virus on door-handles, tables, silverware, surfaces, in heating and air conditioning systems and any other of the multitude of places virus has or could be found.” P.F. Chang’s, No. 20STCV17169, Feb. 4, 2021 Minute Order. Likewise, the Superior Court in Orange County recently overruled an insurer’s demurrer, holding that the “coronavirus and COVID-19” may cause “direct physical loss” or “physical damage” sufficient to plead a claim for coverage. Goodwill, No. 30-2020-01169032-CU-IC-CXC, Dkt. 79.

Such reasoning is amply supported by science and pre-pandemic California precedents. Just as the home in Hughes was held to be physically harmed when the imminent risk of collapse rendered it “useless” but otherwise “intact,” so too is actual or imminent viral intrusion and ensuing loss of use an apt example of physical loss and damage. 199 Cal. App. 2d at 248-49; accord Strickland, 200 Cal. App. 3d at 801.¹⁷ Further, just as the Armstrong Court reasoned that a building sustains “physical injury” when its components are such that “common daily activities may cause asbestos fibers to be released,” likewise a business also intuitively suffers physical injury where its common function of hosting employees, staff, and patrons at its physical premises suddenly becomes a health hazard. 45 Cal. App. 4th at 91.

Accordingly, Plan Check’s injury—the forced closure of its retail operations due to the pandemic and related governmental limitations—fits squarely within the grant of coverage against “physical loss of or damage to” property. At minimum, AmGuard has failed to carry its burden of establishing that its contrary, restrictive interpretation of its insurance policy is “the only reasonable one,” and so it is not entitled to dismissal of its policyholder’s claim. MacKinnon v. Truck Ins. Exch., 31 Cal. 4th 635, 655 (2003).

¹⁷ See also 10A Couch on Ins. § 148:46 (citing cases “allowing coverage based on physical damage despite the lack of physical alteration of the property,” where “threatened physical damage” rendered premises “uninhabitab[le]” and “trigger[ed] the insured’s obligation to mitigate the impending loss”).

D. The Ruling Below Erects Barriers to Coverage that Lack a Precedential or Policy Basis

The ruling below identified various bases for excusing the insurer’s coverage obligations, none of which find support in California law—which requires insurance coverage to turn on the language that the insurer actually uses in the insurance policy, construed in accordance with California’s rules of insurance policy interpretation. Universal City Studios Credit Union v. Cumis Ins. Soc’y, 208 Cal. App. 4th 730, 737 (2012).

First, the district court predicted that California law would require proof of “tangible alteration” to property, above and beyond proof of impaired use, to establish physical loss or damage. 1-ER-010. Yet California courts, in decisions not addressed below, have expressly disavowed this standard. In Hughes, the Court of Appeal rejected the notion that a home rendered “useless” by an earth-altering landslide “has not been ‘damaged’ ... unless some tangible injury to the physical structure itself could be detected.” 199 Cal. App. 2d at 248. Further, in Pacific Marine, the court made clear that “[d]irect physical loss under an all-risk policy generally may include losses due to either theft or conversion”—i.e., perils defined not by structural alterations, but by their capacity to destroy the use and enjoyment of physical property. Pac. Marine, 248 F. Supp. 3d at 993 (citing EOTT Energy, 45 Cal. App. 4th at 569). Most recently, in P.F.

Chang's, the Los Angeles County Superior Court held that “physical loss of or damage to” property may be sufficiently pleaded based on COVID-era “government orders requiring that physical spaces such as [] dining rooms be shut-down,” i.e., orders that impair the use of property without altering its structural makeup. P.F. Chang's, No. 20STCV17169, Feb. 4, 2021 Minute Order. The narrow conception of coverage articulated in the ruling below simply cannot be squared with this long line of precedents.

To the extent that the district court discerned from MRI Healthcare and related cases a “tangible alteration” requirement that excludes loss-of-use based claims, the court’s reliance on such authority is, as detailed in Section IV.B, misplaced. Those cases speak only to circumstances where there is ostensibly no tangible property, see Ward, 114 Cal. App. 4th at 556 (lost computer data); Simon Marketing, 149 Cal. App. 4th at 623 (cancelled contracts), or no conceivable alteration of the insured property by an external peril, see MRI Healthcare, 187 Cal. App. 4th at 780 (inherent machine defect). None of those cases cast doubt on an insured’s eligibility for coverage where, as here, the usability of its tangible property (here, restaurant space) is adversely altered by a fortuitous peril (namely, the pandemic and attendant restrictions).

Second, the ruling below erred insofar as it suggests that Plan Check’s injuries are not “physical” merely because they involve “detrimental economic impact.” 1-ER-006. Such reasoning ignores the Court of Appeal’s admonition that the “correct principle [] is not that economic losses, by definition, do not constitute property damage,” because it is “difficult to conceive of loss-of-use damages as anything other than economic losses.” Thee Sombrero, Inc. v. Scottsdale Ins. Co., 28 Cal. App. 5th 729, 739 (2018) (liability coverage) (emphasis in original and citation omitted). “Rather,” as the Court explained, “the correct principle is that losses that are exclusively economic, without any accompanying physical damage or loss of use of tangible property, do not constitute property damage.” Id. (emphasis added).

Here, Plan Check has alleged property damage, i.e., loss of use of tangible property (its restaurants) due to an external physical force (the pandemic and related restrictions). Further, Plan Check seeks to recover lost business income not because of an exclusively economic event (such as a loss in market popularity of its restaurant), but because it purchased business income coverage specifically designed to insure against business losses in the event of unexpected physical harm like that which it has alleged. Plan Check’s losses, which are both physical and economic, are thus squarely within the scope of coverage.

Third, the district court put forth a faulty “slippery slope” argument to justify its rejection of coverage for the physical use restrictions wrought by the pandemic. 1-ER-009-10. According to the court below, allowing for the possibility of coverage for pandemic-related losses of use would require green-lighting property coverage for any and all impaired use claims—no matter how absurd—including claims concerning the tightening of occupancy codes or curfew times, or the malfunctioning of machinery due to “software bug[s].” Id.

Ultimately, the district court’s concern was misplaced. Plan Check’s pandemic-related losses are readily distinguishable from the hypotheticals posited by the district court, because whereas the former are wrought by a fortuitous and unprecedented pandemic, the latter are prompted by non-fortuitous forces such as internal property defects or code regulations that inhere in the operation of any business property. In other words, “[t]he fortuity concept ..., a foundational concept in insurance loss,” 10A Couch on Ins. § 148:46, furnishes precisely the “manageable bounds” (1-ER-009) needed to set this case apart from the parade of horrors envisioned by the district court.¹⁸

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Court should remand to the district court with instructions to grant leave to amend (or in the alternative, affirm on narrow exclusionary grounds), and not take any further actions to certify or affirm the physical injury issues discussed in this case.

Respectfully Submitted,

s/ David Goodwin

David B. Goodwin
COVINGTON & BURLING LLP

*Counsel for Amicus Curiae
United Policyholders*

Dated: February 12, 2021

¹⁸ Finally, note that the court identified one other hypothetical in its parade of horrors—namely, coverage for temporary evacuation of a home due to “nearby wildfires” that end up being extinguished before they destroy property—that in fact raises a plausible coverage scenario under California law. 1-ER-010. In Hughes, the court found in favor of coverage for homeowners whose home was temporarily unstable due to a landslide—even though their home had been “completely stabiliz[ed]” by the time of litigation and never ended up collapsing—because for a period of time their home was “completely useless.” 199 Cal. App. 2d at 248-49. In like manner, a business whose property cannot fully be used for some time because of the imminent (if unrealized) intrusion of fire or a lethal virus naturally suffers coverage-qualifying physical loss or damage.

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS
FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT

Form 8. Certificate of Compliance for Briefs

Instructions for this form: <http://www.ca9.uscourts.gov/forms/form08instructions.pdf>

9th Cir. Case Number(s) No. 20-56020

I am the attorney or self-represented party.

This brief contains 6,137 words, excluding the items exempted by Fed. R. App. P. 32(f). The brief's type size and typeface comply with Fed. R. App. P. 32(a)(5) and (6).

I certify that this brief (select only one):

complies with the word limit of Cir. R. 32-1.

is a cross-appeal brief and complies with the word limit of Cir. R. 28.1-1.

is an amicus brief and complies with the word limit of Fed. R. App. P. 29(a)(5), Cir. R. 29-2(c)(2), or Cir. R. 29-2(c)(3).

is for a death penalty case and complies with the word limit of Cir. R. 32-4.

complies with the longer length limit permitted by Cir. R. 32-2(b) because (select only one):

it is a joint brief submitted by separately represented parties;

a party or parties are filing a single brief in response to multiple briefs; or a party or parties are filing a single brief in response to a longer joint brief.

complies with the length limit designated by court order dated _____.

is accompanied by a motion to file a longer brief pursuant to Cir. R. 32-2(a).

Signature s/ David Goodwin Date February 12, 2021
(use "s/[typed name]" to sign electronically-filed documents)