Dear _____,

[I/we] are writing to ask your company for a courtesy in connection with the Contents portion of our insurance claim.

As you know, [my/our] home and a lifetime of memories and possessions were destroyed in a fire on [DATE OF LOSS]. [I/We] [am/are] cooperating fully with your company and have provided all the information you've asked for so far.

Every single item that was in [my/our] home – from the smallest (spice jars, band-aids) to the largest (big screen t.v., our piano) is gone. [I/We] lived in [my/our] home for _____ years. [I/We] had _____ children, so their possessions were in the home and destroyed as well. (insert a sentence or two that helps the reader understand just how many different items were in the home). The experience [I/we] [am/are] going through is emotionally and financially devastating.

Your company placed a total insured value on the contents of [my/our] home of $_____. [I/We] realize your company has loss documentation procedures that are designed to deter fraud. [I/We] understand you generally require claimants to submit a detailed inventory and valuation of each individual item that was damaged or destroyed. In light of [my/our] circumstances, [I/we] [am/are] asking you to waive that requirement here.

The fire that took [my/our] home was sudden and accidental. [I/We] clearly did not burn down our own home. Everything you insured is now gone and needs to be replaced, so in theory, [I/we] [am/are] owed the full amount of [my/our] Contents insurance limits.

[I/We] [am/are] writing to ask that you waive the requirement that [I/we] itemize and value each individual item, and that you settle [my/our] contents claim in full without delay. The time and struggle of recalling all the thousands of items [I/we] lost is challenging enough, but the emotions [I/we] experience every time [I/we] recall a treasured item that's gone is acutely painful and seems unnecessary.

Surveys of previous disaster survivors confirm that many insurers have waived this itemization requirement in the past. [I/We] are asking for that same courtesy here.

Sincerely,

YOUR NAME
